Xmas gifts to help bush

AUSTRALIANS are being urged to buy their Christmas gifts from country outlets to help drought-stricken areas.

NSW Liberal senator Hollie Hughes wants Australians to consider splurging with small businesses in regional communities by using an online portal. "The difference so many Australians can make if they choose to buy from a country business will spread a lot of goodwill to our hard-working families in the bush," Senator Hughes said.

Shoppers can buy goods through gocountryforchristmas.com.au and businesses can register on the website.
